BUSINESS OVERVIEW:

The two giant denim producer countries China and United States have cut down their production of denim, as a result of rising labour and energy costs. Despite of this vast export opportunity, sluggish export demand and vast competition in international market created difficulties to Indian denim players to achieve export target.

During the financial year 2012-13 the textile industry passed out from challenging operating environment amongst uncertainty over demand growth and volatility in raw material prices. The rising power, fuel and wage costs, higher interest rates and domestic and global competition increased margin pressure over the industry.

Quiet international demand of cotton and surplus production had retained cotton prices stable and range bound during the entire year. The exports revenues had shown downfall on the back of the sturdy economic slowdown in key export destinations of US and Europe. The global demand of denim fabrics had increased but hard-hitting competition from well-known denims producers' countries had reduced profit margin. Domestically, weak consumer sentiment, high inflation and low wage growth had been reduced denim sales. With the help of strong domestic consumption and sustain export demands the denims and textiles industry wrote the success story of good profitability and development.

Despite of major global economic challenges, fluctuation in currency value, high cost of wages and power in year 2012-13 your Company had reported very good turnover and profit for the financial year ended March, 2013.

OVERALL REVIEW:

Indian Textile Industry is one of the leading textile industries in the world. Though was predominantly unorganized industry even a few years back, but the scenario started changing after the economic liberalization of Indian economy in 1991. The opening up of economy gave the much-needed thrust to the Indian textile industry, which has now successfully become one of the largest in the world. India earns about 27 percent of its total foreign exchange through textile exports. Further, the textile industry of India also contributes nearly 14 percent of the total industrial production of the country. It also contributes around 4 percent to the GDP of the country. India textile industry is also the largest in the country in terms of employment generation. It not only generates jobs in its own industry, but also opens up scopes for the other ancillary sectors. India textile industry currently generates employment to more than 35 million people.

The financial year 2012-13 was marked by stability and bit restoration of operating margins for denims textile players across the value chain led by steady cotton prices, and the consequent positive impact on liquidity. Demand of denims remained sluggish across the value chain in at the end of fiscal year 2012-13. For apparel exporters, order sizes reduced, hence volumes fell. However, rupee realizations increased partially due to rupee depreciation against the USD and Euro. Global economic slowdown has reduced demand of denim in global markets. Indian denim industry had faced vast international completion from other large denim manufacturer nation Pakistan, Bangladesh, Indonesia etc. The cut throat domestic and international competition has reduced margins and insisted the denim manufactures to focus on the quality of products. Despite the economic crisis, domestic as well as international demand of denim has been growing at the satisfactory rate.

Indian Market:

India's textiles industry is one of the mainstays of the national economy. It is also one of the largest contributing sectors of India's exports worldwide. The textiles sector has witnessed a spurt in investment during the last five years. The textiles industry attracted foreign direct investments (FDI) worth ₹ 5,674.45 crore (US$ 1.04 billion) between the year 2000 to 2013.

With new undertakings entering the denims industry and existing enterprises expanding their production capacities in expectation of high demand, the industry fear that vast competition would put pressure on denim producer's profit margins.

With the help of better capacity utilization and an improved product mix the domestic denim market has grown at 15% comparing to last fiscal year. Increase in labour & power cost, vast domestic completion, government policies and high finance cost are some of challenge for denim industries. Controlled cotton prices are key advantage for the industry. Also increased denim capacity on India level by around 40% is a challenge for the denim industry.

Export Market:

During the year denim exporters revenue has remain subdued on the back of the persistent economic slowdown in key export destinations of US and Europe and continuous deterioration in India's competitiveness. However, to offset the impact, Indian exporters are diversifying into other geographies.
