Management Discussion & Analysis Report

SWOT ANALYSIS

Strengths

Your company's projects are in the area of Human resources - more specifically in the area of E - Learning. Our e-Learning Platform: e-HRDCampus has equipped your company with learning consulting abilities and creation and customization of online courses and multimedia products, development of online campuses and lease of online courses to the education and business communities. Emphasis on research and development has enabled your company to address the clients' needs for delivering high quality instruction via the Internet.

Weaknesses

Due to the unfortunate developments in the past where the company has been caught in the wrong foot by market changes and inability to respond to the market, the company has had to incur losses. The company has limited resources at its disposal which may handicap the company from implementing the strategies in an ideal manner.

Opportunities

Although most training budgets were down, the percentage of training programs delivered through e-learning grew from 14% to 16%. (Training Magazine, Fall 2005). Clearly companies are turning toward e-learning as a strategic way to reduce training costs, increase reach, and leverage internet investments. Research continues to show a fragmented and complex marketplace for Learning Management Systems(LMS). The market is only about half penetrated, and many companies with LMS systems are already thinking about replacing them. In 2005 the ERP players (Peoplesoft, SAP, Oracle, and Siebel) did not make any significant impact in the market. Each has a few customers, but products are still immature products and none have "broken through" to become a leader

Threats, Risks and Concerns

The competition is also setting the pace. New standards are emerging all the time. The inability to respond to these changes in a timely manner will make the company obsolete.

The implementation costs for a LMS system is considerably high. Typically implementation costs are 1.5-2X the initial cost of software. Implementation times run from 9 to 18 months and sometimes longer.

Review of Operation & Future prospects

a. Industry Structure and development

As per the "2005: e-Learning Year in Review Report" the E-Learning marketplace "grew up." Recent research tells us that now, more than 4 years into the application of internet technologies to training, as much as 20% or more of corporate training is being conducted online. These numbers are staggering: as much as $12-14 Billion of total training content, services, and technology is now dedicated to e-learning world wide. In 2003 estimates showed that approximately 16% of training was conducted via e-learning—indicating that the growth rate was nearly 30%.

What happens in all markets as they grow is that buyers start to become more pragmatic. Rather than buying products because they are "exciting" or "technologically interesting," they buy to solve a very specific problem. This is the transition which has taken place in internet-based corporate training. There are no longer any "one size fits all" solutions. Buyers now buy to solve specific problems – not just to "catch the wave" of new approaches.

There are e-learning solutions, for example, which are very well designed and suited for field sales and customer service training. There are "out-of-the-box" proven solutions for IT certification and mid-level soft skills training. The most mature e-learning application is IT training. In other application areas such as sales training, management training, and application training, solutions are more hand-crafted and not as "productized."

Your company is seeking to carve a niche for itself in this online management training market. We seek to deliver a customized and personalized e-learning experience for the executives of very large organizations. The E-HRD Campus, which is primarily an e-learning platform provides all the planning, delivery, tracking, testing, and reporting functionality that most e-Learning projects will ever need. It also provides the infrastructure and dynamic content integration for additional optional components and external tools and consulting opportunities.

b. Future prospects and Segment Reporting

Your company has gone through a tough time in the past due to market changes as well as internal management issues. However the future looks promising with the introduction of new systems and processes. Your Company's sole product E-HRD Campus is promising to be a great solution.

In addition, the company plans to use this tool as third party tool to plug - in with other vendors' products besides
