MANAGEMENT DISCUSSION AND ANALYSIS

Wind Power Development – International Scenario

Last year witnessed significant growth in capacity of wind power projects throughout the world. In USA, extension of the attractive renewable energy policy for two more years led to considerable investment in windpower projects (2,430 MW during the year).

In Europe too, the trend appears to be the same. In some European countries, scarcity of good sites on land is resulting in a sizable number of offshore windmill projects. This trend is expected to continue for some more years.

Volatility in international oil prices, uncertain supplies and increased consumption are also factors that are contributing to greater emphasis on development on new sources of renewable energy. Some countries have come up with special tariffs and incentives for renewable energy projects so that they can in future reduce dependence on fossil fuels. Compliance requirements of some European countries in accordance with Kyoto Protocol has also boosted growth of windpower projects in developed countries.

Wind Power Development – Domestic Scenario

In India, the windpower sector has again witnessed a substantial growth last year. Total installed capacity has reached almost 4,000 MW and more projects are still in the pipeline. Today India ranks 4th in the world in terms of windpower capacities next to Germany, Spain and USA. Even in Maharashtra, after a short subdued period, projects are coming up in new regions. This has been possible due to the attractive tariff regime notified by the Regulatory Commission to sell power to utility companies. This special tariff has been restricted to additional capacities upto 750 MW and these are already booked and projects are expected to become operational in the next 18 months.

Power Tariff and Government Policy

The continued reforms in the power industry encompass the renewable energy sector as well. The Electricity Act 2003 suggests State Regulatory Commissions to promote renewable energy in the form of standalone units in rural areas and also by way of grid connected projects. These reforms would help speed up economic development in rural parts of the country. However, shortages in peak demand are expected to continue till the proposed mega power projects are implemented expeditiously. The need is for a long term strategy in the power sector that assures cost-efficient and reliable supply to all categories of consumers.

Performance of Company Projects

During 2004-05, the generation of windpower units from your Company's projects has increased by 1.6% over last year. This was possible mainly due to improvements made through team initiatives that have resulted in better uptimes of turbines and of the grid. The generation of your Company's projects is among the best in Maharashtra. Wind velocities and patterns have supported our efforts. We have awarded a long term O&M contract to our turbine manufacturer. We continue to take all possible steps to improve generation, operational efficiencies and performance.

Cautionary Statement

Statement in this management discussion and analysis describing the Company's objectives, projections, estimates and expectations may be 'forward looking statements' within the meaning of applicable laws and regulations. Actual results might differ substantially or materially from those expressed or implied. Important developments that could affect the Company's operations include a downtrend in the industry-global or domestic or both, significant changes in political and economic environment in India, tax laws, litigations, labour relations and interest costs.
