Letter from the Chairman

Dear Shareholder:

1999-2000 was a year of transition for Blue Star. The Company was busy restructuring itself around its core businesses - airconditioning and refrigeration (AC&R), and marketing of professional electronics, industrial equipment and services. The restructuring process involved spinning off the software business and winding up the industrial projects activity.

The long awaited demerger of the International Software Division (ISD) took place on April 4, 2000 after a cumbersome and extended legal process of about 20 months. In spite of our best efforts to expedite the procedure, the demerger could not be achieved before the end of the financial year. As a result, the audited accounts for the year ended March 31, 2000 are for the consolidated Company including ISD.

In order to incorporate the effect of demerger in the books of Blue Star Infotech Limited (BSIL) and present a complete report to its shareholders, the financial year of BSIL has been extended to 15 months ending June 30, 2000. Accordingly, the Annual Report of BSIL to be published will cover the period April 1, 1999 to June 30, 2000.

The New Blue Star

Last year, with the restructuring of the Company under implementation, I had dealt with the important question of Blue Star's future without the divested businesses of software services and industrial projects. I was optimistic about our prospects and explained why I felt that way, but I was not in a position to offer tangible proof. The Company's financial results for 1999-2000 provide supporting evidence in this regard.

The consolidated accounts of Blue Star obviously do not provide separate figures for software and the other business of the Company. However, in the interests of greater transparency we have shown segregated Profit & Loss Accounts for the 12-month period, by way of supplementary information annexed to this letter. These show that:

- ★ After several years of high growth, the Company's software business slowed down. This was mainly due to a fall in US onsite revenue on account of the US preoccupation with the Y2K problem; and management's focus on the spinoff of the software business. The annual report of BSIL will provide additional analysis and details regarding the software business.
- ★ For Blue Star, excluding software, Total Income was not much different from the consolidated figures. ISD accounted for 8% of the total revenues.
- ★ On the profit front, while software accounted for 35% of the consolidated Profit After Tax, the important point to note is that the entire improvement in profit last year came from the non-software businesses. Profit Before Tax grew by a healthy 73% to Rs.17.10 crores, while Profit After Tax surged by 189% to Rs.15.14 crores.

In any business, the key variables affecting profits are sales volume, value addition or gross margins and the overall level of business expenses. Last year, with scope to increase sales volume being somewhat limited by a slow economy, and expense control already reasonably tight, the major opportunity for better profit performance was to focus on higher gross margins. This is especially so since more than three-quarters of the sales income is consumed by material and other direct costs. Efforts to drive down the cost of sales ratio pervaded the entire Company resulting in an improvement in gross margin in the non-software business by 2.7% from 23.4% to 26.1%. The effect of the higher gross margin was to enhance profit by Rs.11.55 crores, a remarkable achievement in a sluggish economy, facing severe competitive pressures.

The income tax provision was only 11% of profit because of good tax planning. The tax holiday on Dadra Plant was a major reason for the modest tax liability and will provide an effective tax shield in the current year as well.

Improving Gross Margins

The Directors' Report briefly mentions the three-pronged strategy to enhance gross margins. I would like to elaborate on this.

In airconditioning projects, products, and the allied manufacturing activities, better engineering and design were combined with reduced material procurement prices. Generally lower market prices for raw materials and components along with scientific supply-chain management techniques, resulted in significant cost reductions. Manufacturing profits were also favourably affected by a substantial increase in capacity utilisation.

After-sales service continues to be an excellent business because it offers high gross margins and limited competitive pressure. The key to success is meeting customer expectations and building customer loyalty through proactive measures. Service was reorganised by integrating it with sales for each line of business. This provided better customer support and our customers have generally been pleased with this change. In the reorganisation, care was taken to ensure that the focus on service as a business was not diffused. Service remains a profit centre with its own strategy, resources and investments such as the induction of marketing resources into after-sales service; an extensive trained network of service associates; upgraded computerised systems including service parts management. These measures, which were explained in my speech at last year's Annual General Meeting, resulted in significant growth in service revenues and profits. The third factor influencing the increase in overall gross margin and profit was the sharp decline in billing in industrial projects. In earlier years, low or even negative gross margins on some fixed price contracts dragged down the average gross margin and the overall profitability of the Company. With most of these contracts having been progressively completed over the year, the negative factors reducing gross margins are now largely behind us and future profits should improve further.

Shareholder Value

Investors have definite views about shareholder value and have little patience for corporate managements that are not able to enhance the value of their investment. Your Board of Directors is acutely conscious of its responsibility to shareholders and regularly reviews the Company's strategies and performance. In a highly volatile stock market, we believe our prime responsibility is to deliver superior financial results and we expect that discerning investors will recognise our performance in the long run, especially with increased communication through our website (www.bluestarindia.com) and other channels.

Last year, the consolidated return on average capital employed (ROCE) improved from 16.06% to 18.80% while return on average shareholders funds (RONW) increased from 15.84% to 20.84%. These are respectable figures. This year, with reduction of the equity capital by 25% after the software demerger, the profitability ratios should be even better because of a higher numerator, viz. profits, in the non-software businesses, and a lower denominator, viz. capital employed.

Yours sincerely,

ASHOK M ADVANI
