Market Scenario

After a prolonged period of severe turbulence the financial markets across the globe have, since mid-March, not only stabilized but have turned buoyant once again, auguring well for the Intermediaries. The hope of further revival of the capital markets depends on how fast the recession hit western world's economies recover. Fortunately, early signs are beginning to emerge indicating that at least the worse is behind and the developed markets are beginning to respond to the wide range of stimulus packages being dished out by the various central banks across the globe, in a coordinated effort.

However, it is indeed a heartening matter to note that Indian Markets have successfully de-coupled themselves, to a large extent, and is now emerging strongly as an independent market that holds a lot of promise to the financial and capital market participants. Although the GDP growth rate has slowed down in the recent fiscal year, we still have a far superior growth rates as compared to most other emerging Asian Markets. Thus, India remains a favoured destination for several large-ticket Investors.

The biggest boost to the 'Brand India' has come from the Electoral results gaining mandate to govern the Country for the next five-year term. The overwhelming factor of a stable formation, paves the way for the ruling new government to take bold reform measures. The much ignored financial sector reforms are now expected to be implemented with a renewed sense of urgency on a fast track.
