Now India has claims to be an IT nation, despite its poor showing in terms of PC connectivity. But in 2003, the nation will definitely realize the promises offered by the IT industry. IT technologies are becoming consumer friendly and middle class homes are aspiring for more and more, in spite of purchasing power constraints.

And this will be the same status for your company in the year 2003.

There is a palpable increase in the enthusiasm for technology products. E-mail has become very popular as a means of communicating with dear once across the miles, which is the by process of server. And your company is becoming specialist in the setting of the server in the Indian Territory.

E-governance initiatives have been received well where it has been implemented. There is a very healthy competition amongst the states to showcase their progress in the sphere. Also connectivity and speeds are bound to get better this year with more and more companies' executing their big dreams. It would not be far-fetched to say that for India, this year might be a watershed in the usage of technology devices used for communicating. Definitely, it is the year of convergence as devices that started off as hardcore It became consumer devices. On the other hand, consumer devices have been adding on it features.

A loyal channel will remain the best bet for a company's dominance in the market and your company will contribute the best to the market to get back a good return on investments to shareholders and as well as to the customers.
