YEARWISE SALES AND EBIT

Management Discussion and Analysis

(a) Industry Structure and Developments

The Company's core business operations fall in the broad categories of agriculture, construction, automotive, energy, mining and more specifically the on-off highway power transmission sector. Indian Manufacturers of gears for these markets/industries can be classified on the basis of being an original equipment supplier or a replacement market supplier or a combination of both. Currently, leading manufacturers in these industries source their gear requirements through their captive in-house facilities, if any, or from suppliers approved by them. Fairfield Atlas Ltd., is one such approved and preferred supplier to OEM's in the markets mentioned above. The demand for the Company's products is a derived demand and hence is dependent upon growth rate of its OEM customers. The growth of the Indian economy and the rise in level of income of the population together with changes in lifestyle are likely to enlarge the automotive market which can therefore positively impact the Company's domestic business. The continued Government support of rural development and adoption of improved agricultural practices are developments that can increase demand in the agricultural market. The Company being associated with some of the largest tractor manufacturing companies in the country may stand to benefit from these developments in the form of increased share of business.

(b) Opportunities and Threats

The Company is a part of OC Oerlikon Corporation AG Pfaffikon a global technology company and a leader in quality and reliability. The company alongwith its fellow subsidiary in India viz. Graziano Transmission (India) Pvt.Ltd., forms part of the Oerlikon Drive Systems group within the country. The various synergies between the two units in the group can bring about a wide range of capabilities and drive solutions in the market thus creating potential for new opportunities in the drive system business. A favourable monsoon can signal an increase in tractor sales thus giving an opportunity for the company to augment its supplies to that sector of its business. Growing real estate and Government sponsored infrastructure development presents the company with opportunities for increasing supplies of components for construction equipment. However, the company faces competition from other suppliers in the domestic market. Further the setting up of captive units by some of its customers may also pose a threat or present a stiff challenge to the domestic business of the company. However, the budding recovery of the US economy could present opportunities for increasing the product range of the export business so as to offset shortfall if any in the domestic business.

(c) Segment-Wise Performance

The company has determined its business segments as on-highway (select applications), agriculture, mining, energy, specialty industrial and construction related transmission gears. As indicated above, the company will evaluate and establish strategic investment and growth to appropriate segments that will yield appropriate returns on investment.

(d) Outlook

The outlook for the company during the coming year continues to be positive. With the US economy once again manifesting a revival, the company is bracing itself to tap this potential in its export business. The company is also carving out niche areas for its products to drive growth and where competition is minimal.

On the domestic side the country is associated as a supplier to dominant manufacturers of Tractors in the country. The expectations of a favourable monsoon and buoyant rural economy has helped increasing mechanisation of farming in the country and may consequently stimulate growth of the components for this sector. A good monsoon impacts the economy since agriculture and rural income are linked to industry.

The market demand for construction equipment is expected to increase on account of the booming real estate and the increase in spending in urban infrastructure development, roads, general construction sectors and
