

53rd ANNUAL REPORT 2002 - 2003

ITI'S contribution to National Telecom Infrastructure (1948-2003)

Dear Shareholder,

As the telecom equipment industry continues to battle weak demand, 2003 has been a new year of decline for equipment manufacturers' revenues.

Although there was a shortfall in meeting your Company's targetted turnover for the year ended March 2003 severely affecting its bottomline, the redeeming feature of the year's performance is that ITI has emerged as the top telecom turnkey services company in the country. It's credentials as a total solutions provider having been thus established, the task on hand is to rejuvenate the production activity which is your Company's core competency.

While the pace of technology from wire to wireless has been very sudden, both the limited mobility WLL - CDMA (Wireless in Local Loop - Code Division Multiple Access) and the GSM (Global System for Mobile) cellular are growing at a phenomenal rate. In tune with this trend, our initiatives for the manufacture of CDMA technology have resulted in signing the license agreement with global leader ZTE of China. The MOU recently signed will similarly lead to GSM equipment manufacture. An exclusive production line being planned for export of electronic equipment, should keep our revenue streams flowing. Besides GSM/CDMA manufacturing, next generation IP switches, DWDM (Dense Wave Division Multiplexing), etc., our new focus includes revenue sharing in networking projects. Timely delivery of products and service projects has been accorded the highest priority to ensure utmost customer satisfaction. The restructuring of operations, rationalisation of manufacturing facilities, diversification into non-telecom products using the existing infrastructure and upgradation of employee skills are among the several steps we have put through in order to improve the bottomline.

That India has attained a teledensity of only 5% of its population, indicates a huge market potential in this sector. The size of the equipment manufacturing industry and communication services market is poised to grow in the next few years. With the infrastructure strength ITI commands, your Company's share in meeting this demand looks promising.

The steady performance of ITI stock on the country's bourses reflects a deep level of investor confidence. We seek your continued support in our constant endeavour to give you value for money.
