DEAR STAKEHOLDER,

This has been a mixed year for us. We are all immensely saddened by the loss of our chairman. However, we have all resolved to put our heads and hearts to bring our Chairman's dream of making Jindal Stainless the very best in every sense true.

As Walter Lippmann said,

"The final test of a leader is that he leaves behind him in other men the conviction and the will to carry on."

Our Chairman was and will always remain our guiding force. Memories of his kindness, compassion and strength will always fill our hearts.

It is with this conviction that we plan to make Jindal Stainless a stronger company.

2004 was a landmark year for Jindal Stainless, as your company witnessed its highest ever sales, market leadership & profitability.

Demand for our products has risen dramatically due to an improving global economy and, especially, the rapid growth of China, which now consumes nearly 30 percent of the world's steel. This surging demand has strained raw material supplies, further exacerbating tight conditions. As a result, metals prices have risen dramatically, and industry profitability is at its highest level in decades.

But even an era of high profits has its challenges. Driven in part by increased profitability, consolidation has been accelerating at the regional level in the United States, Europe, Japan and Brazil, and it is now beginning to take place on a global scale. Meanwhile, new entrants from Russia and China are moving aggressively to play a larger role in that global arena - all of which is reshaping the competitive landscape in the industry.

To thrive in this environment, metal companies need to manage increasingly complex and geographically dispersed operations. They need to increase output to take advantage of rising demand. They have to move quickly to integrate merged and acquired operations into a coherent whole. And as always, they need to continue efforts to increase efficiency and control costs - especially in anticipation of the next turn of the market cycle, which is likely to see a return of intense margin pressures. In all, metals companies need to work on many fronts and to find new ways to operate - both to grow today and prepare themselves for the future.

While we believe we have made important progress over the past year to stabilize the business. As we strategically navigate through perhaps the most challenging conditions our industry has ever experienced, disciplined financial management, control over costs and expanding customer relationships remain our top business priorities.

Our Philosophy is that leadership positions drive growth and shareholder value. Leadership positions enable us to serve clients better, attract partners and intellectual capital, and lead to meaningful economies of scale that benefit all stakeholders.

Before I end, I would like to take this opportunity to thank you once again for being with us in the past and look forward to our continued association in the future.

Ratan Jindal
Vice Chairman & Managing Director
