CORPORATE GOVERNANCE REPORT

The turmoil in the global financial markets and its spill over effects into the real economy has once again raised questions on the efficacy of corporate governance practices. Despite the strengthening of corporate governance mechanisms over the years, the global meltdown brought to the fore several instances of deficient regulatory and board oversight. During the boom time, prudence gave way to excessive risk taking under the lure of extraordinary profits. Distorted remuneration policies nurtured a culture of greed, rewarding short-term considerations at the expense of long-term interests of companies. With a change in tide, boards have recognized the importance of an integrated, well-monitored risk management system and the need to closely link performance and remuneration. Though a corporate governance framework should constantly evolve in response to changing market dynamics, business ethics derived from principles of transparency, integrity, accountability and prudence must be steadfast.

In India, increased shareholder activism, regulatory vigilance and an alert media have played a prominent role in strengthening corporate governance mechanisms. Although there have been criticisms about the paucity of qualified independent directors in India, the corporate governance framework continues to be robust. For instance, in India shareholders have always had a 'say on pay' that is mandated by law, unlike many countries where the decision is largely left in the hands of the Board of Directors or their compensation committees. Further, for many Indian companies, regulatory compliance is only part of the answer to improved corporate governance standards as they voluntarily seek to raise the bar on governance related issues.

The key challenge for boards is to develop their own sense of corporate priorities and their own views on matters that are most important for the success of the company. Corporate governance is not a one-size-fits-all proposition, but needs to be customised into the culture of the organisation.

Corporate Governance at KAISER :

For KAISER, the essence of corporate governance is to ensure transparency in its business operations. The Board of Directors and senior management delineate clear lines of responsibility throughout the organisation. In order to fulfil its responsibilities, the Board of Directors has access to accurate, relevant and timely information. KAISER has always maintained that an integrated way of thinking is via responsibility of action. Moreover, the Company strives to be a sustainable and dependable community organisation as sustained governance is the cornerstone in building and maintaining relationships with borrowers, depositors, agents, shareholders and other stakeholders.
