Annual Report
2019-20

CHAIRMAN'S STATEMENT

Dear Shareholders,

As I sit down to write this letter, the world is confronting one of the greatest health crisis that we have ever seen in our lifetime. What started as a little-known virus in Central China has grown and spread itself by leaps and bounds all over the globe. It speaks greatly into the interconnectedness and intertwined nature of the global economy. My thoughts remain with everyone, especially the front-line and healthcare workers who are working in the face of the COVID-19 challenge.

At it's core, it is a public health crisis that has manifested itself into a financial crisis. Its effect will take a few months to ricochet through the markets – however with each passing day it is getting abundantly clear that it is something all of us as a community will have to live with in the near-term. As we work through and deal with the spiraling effects of the pandemic, my focus remains on what we as a firm can do to remain strong, resilient, and well-positioned to support our colleagues, customers and stakeholders emerge out of this unscathed.

2019 marked the commencement of development of Jeevanam – our 400,000-square-feet, high-quality, multifamily affordable housing project in Sonarpur. Upon completion, this project will house 743 for-sale, purpose-built units targeting the Economically Weaker Section ('EWS') and Low-Income Group ('LIG') segment of the population. While we remain committed to meeting the timelines set out initially, the pandemic has set in motion a great period of uncertainty for the near future. The shelter-in-place guidelines put in place by the Government of India has seen the necessary cessation of the general commerce nationwide. This has led to a large-scale exodus of migrant workers – the lifeblood of the sector – from the construction sites to the hinterlands of India. The disruption caused to the traditional supply chain as a result of this stay-at-home order has deprived the projects of critical raw materials or finished products. As a direct consequence of these, the construction activity has come to a grinding halt.

The path forward is one of many unknowns. Everyone from corporations and small-and-medium sized businesses to employees and workers have been caught flat footed and displaced from the normal chain of revenue generation. No matter the challenge, we manage the firm with a long-term view of creating an enduring business. We are there for our customers, employees in good and bad times – we are a port in the storm. It is in these trying times that we want reassure our shareholders of our commitment of building a well-functioning organization with a clear mission and purpose.

As a real-estate developer, my focus will be to tide over this storm by continually building a fortress-like balance sheet so that we remain well-capitalized and well-positioned for anything that the future may hold for us. In what is expected to be a stricter operating environment going forward, organizations with a track record of delivery, strong consumer franchise and best-in-class practices will continue to attract the kind of patient, long-term and institutional capital necessary for the successful delivery of projects in this 'new normal'.

As we get started with a return to normalcy in fits and starts, we are focused on the safety and well-being of our employees and contractors who are performing the essential services on-site. We've distributed face masks and implemented temperature checks, and put in place extensive social distancing rules at site to help protect them. We regularly sanitize high-touch tools and objects to make sure they are rid of any contamination that may have occurred during the normal course of business. Put simply, there is nothing of greater importance to us than the health of our people.

The real-estate ecosystem has displayed great resilience in the past economic downturns. The jury is still out on the timing and mechanism of the recovery and what it would like. Notwithstanding any of that, it is clear that the industry must survive and it will. While I continue to remain optimistic and have a deep faith in the resiliency of our firm and country, I must also remain pragmatic about the situation at hand. We have all been impacted by the coronavirus. Our challenges are significant and we must do all we can to become a populace much more deeply understanding of our shared humanity and destiny. This pandemic – and the collective responsibility required to stem its spread – is an important reminder that we must all rise to the challenge and confront it.

To all our employees, to our friends, clients, and shareholders, and to all the communities where we operate, please do all you can to stay healthy and be safe.
