REVIEW OF BUSINESS AND FUTURE OUTLOOK:

In the aftermath of September 11, the downturn in the Information Technology became particularly pronounced. Projects which were announced in the US were either put on hold or totally scrapped. This has particularly affected the second and third tier software development companies who derive most of their export earnings from the US.

According to an initial survey conducted by Nasscom the software industry is expected to see a recovery in the third & forth quarter of the financial year. The Nasscom survey also shows that IT Enabled Services (ITES) is expected to be the growth engine for the ensuing year & the future as well. India has emerged as the most preferred destination for such services with many US based companies looking at outsourcing non critical business processes to India.

Members would be aware that the company has being engaged in the ITES space for a while now particularly in the field of Medical Transcription (MT). In this regard the company has already set up the infrastructure as well as a well established delivery model. Your company is planning to harness these strengths and extend its operations to look at more such ITES opportunities. The business development operations in the US are being strengthened and more resources are being allocated with the view to garnering more business in this areas when the upturn in the US economy occurs.

Macro level reports and analysis in US indicate that there may be a plateauing in the downward economy curve which would be followed by a slight upturn. Though some reports indicate caution and opine that this may not happen immediately. However as mentioned above, Nasscom's initial survey indicates a recovery in the third & fourth quarter of the ensuing financial year. Your company shares this opinion and persists with marketing forays and is not sparing any effort in business development.
