MANAGEMENT DISCUSSION AND ANALYSIS

1. Industry Structure and Developments

Masterbatch

Masterbatches are highly concentrated organic and/or inorganic pigments/dyes and additives prepared in polymer carrier resins such as LLDPE, PP, PET, PBT, PC, PA-6, PS etc. suitable for the plastics and textile industry. They are available in granular form and are used at low percentages in the finished product to achieve the desired color and functional properties.

Masterbatches are required in plastics for:

1. Coloration
2. Identification
3. Improved shelf-appeal
4. Better Acceptance
5. Improved Gloss, Texture & Shade
6. Enhancement of functional properties like flame retardancy, Anti-microbial, Light Fastness etc.

On an average, 70% of plastics are either coloured or need functional property enhancements.

Masterbatches are used extensively in a multitude of textile and plastic applications. The advantages of using masterbatches, when compared to alternative methods such as the use of pure pigments, are several. They include safe handling, environmental safety, dust-free working conditions.

The masterbatch industry can be broadly classified into three sectors: organised, medium and small. A substantial part of the market is catered to by the small sector, comprising of a large number of small manufacturing units spread throughout the country. These units mostly cater to their respective localised markets. The medium sector is relatively small in size, though it caters to a larger market. The organised sector comprises of select players, including your Company and caters to the organised and quality conscious market. Due to the high technology and quality requirements of masterbatches, imports also play a major role. The present trend shows that the organized sector is taking over the market share from the small and medium sector by meeting the stringent quality requirements, timely deliveries, prompt technical services and strong R&D backup of the customers.

Engineering Plastic Compounds

In spite of stiff competition your Company's products have been well accepted by the customers. However, your Company could not achieve its targets as estimated. It is expected that the year 2009-10 will be promising.

Your Company will leverage on quality and consistency of its products, as well as on its R&D strength to meet the requirements of the customers.

2. Opportunities and Threats

(i) Key opportunity:

Your Company is a pioneer in manufacturing masterbatches for the synthetic fibre industry based on Polyesters, Nylons and Polypropylenes, for speciality and general purpose applications such as automobiles, carpets, home-furnishings, apparels, non-woven fabrics, technical fibres, etc. It is expected that the demand for the company's product will grow manifold with the increased requirements of polyester fibre industry wherein your Company is a major player.

(ii) Key threats:

Recession in the user industry may affect the demand for the products. Product changes, high fluctuations in the prices of raw materials, competition from domestic and global players and relaxation in import tariff may increase pressure on margins.

Fluctuations in foreign currencies also play a major role in the profitability of the Company.

Your Company, with continuous improvements and upgradation in the technology, developing new products and taking various cost effective measures is confident to meet these challenges.
