12. MANAGEMENT DISCUSSION AND ANALYSIS REPORT

a. Industry Structure & Development

Refractories are primary material used in the internal lining of industrial furnaces, they are heat resistant products used in steel, glass, cement, petrochemicals, fertilizer and ceramic industries. The product range is very wide and no single manufacturer can cater to the entire requirement.

Your company is the biggest refractory manufacturer in Andhra Pradesh and its product range includes fireclay, high alumina, silica and basic refractories. Major consumers of the company's products are steel plants viz., Vishakhapatnam Steel Plant and SAIL units.

Steel industries are major consumers of refractories and account for over 70% of the total refractory consumption. The future of refractory industry is closely linked to that of the steel industry.

b. Opportunities and Threats

Opportunities in the refractory industry would come through high value, high performing refractories supported by design and application engineering. With the recent growth in the steel sector, increased demand for refractories is foreseen.

Threats are foreseen from consolidation of players who have branded products, access to overseas process designers and licensors and R & D support. Any change in the market conditions of steel industry will directly affect the refractory industry.

c. Segment or product wise performance

Your company operates in only one business segment and one product viz., refractories. A brief of the different types of refractories manufactured by the company is given below:

★ Fire Clay: This is a low alumina refractory product and is manufactured by both small and big refractory plants. Hence the market for this product is highly competitive. The price of this product is low and does not require much technology. During the year under review approx. 60% of the total sales of the company was contributed by this product.

★ High Alumina: This is a high alumina refractory product and ranges from 60% to 98% alumina with varied application. The company has a good brand image in this segment and has performed well at Bhilai Steel Plant last year as a result of which it has received additional orders for the current year and is one of the major supplier to VSP under Total Ladle Management (TLM). The Company has recently developed new products in this range for exports. During the year under review this product has accounted for approx. 26% of the total sales of the company.

RAASI REFRACTORIES LIMITED

★ Basic: This is a basic refractory product and comprises of Mag Carbon and Magnesite bricks. The company has good performance record in this category. The company has executed trial order in SAIL-BSP and has fair chances for improving its market share for this product.

★ Silica: This is a quartzite based silica refractory product and is highly technology oriented. In India only two major units are into manufacturing this product. The company has stabilized the production process and has successfully executed the order from VSP. This year the company plans to enter into the coke oven sector of silica bricks and also manufacture dense and super dense quality for glass industry. The company is also expecting growth in exports. The company enjoys geographical advantage for procurement of raw material for manufacture of silica bricks. During the year under review this product has contributed approx 10% of the total sales.

d. Outlook

The company enjoys a brand image for its products. With the present growth in the steel industry, the company is looking at increase in demand for its products.

e. Risks and Concerns:

Reverse in the market trend of the steel industry is a major cause of concern. As most of the raw materials used are imported, any fluctuations in exchange rate, duties, taxes etc., would have a direct bearing on the cost. Further interest burden, fall in net realization, increase in freight and other costs coupled with low capacity utilization and stiff competition are other major factors of concern.

f. Discussion on financial performance with respect to operational performance:

Already discussed elsewhere in this report.

g. Internal control system and their adequacy:

The company has laid down clear policies and procedures for approval and control of various expenditures. The capital expenditure is monitored and controlled by the Board of Directors. The company has adequate internal control to safeguard the assets and for ensuring the optimum utilization of the various resources. The internal control system is designed to ensure that the financial and other records reflect true and correct picture for preparation of financial statements and other MIS to be submitted to various authorities. The internal audit department conducts audit on continuous basis and reviews the policies, procedures and guidelines provided to ensure adequacy of internal control system and adherence to the above. The internal audit findings and recommendations are reviewed by the audit committee and the Board of Directors.

h. Material developments in Human Resources/ Industrial Relations front, including number of people employed.

The company recognizes the importance and contribution of its employees to the growth and development of the company. The company has cordial relations with employees and staff. As at 31st March 2005 the company has about 226 employees working in its factory and various offices.
