MANAGEMENT DISCUSSION AND ANALYSIS:

The global pharmaceutical market will exceed $1.5 trillion by 2023 growing at a 3–6% compound annual growth rate for over the next five years. The key drivers of growth will continue to be the United States and pharmerging markets. In the United States, overall spending growth is driven by a range of factors including new product uptake and brand pricing, while it is offset by patent expiries and generics.

There are few notable trends reshaping the global pharmaceutical marketplace.

- Instances of chronic disease are increasing, placing even greater importance on pharmaceutical industry
- Healthcare policy-makers and payers are increasingly mandating what doctors can prescribe
- Demand for medicines is growing more rapidly in the emerging economies than the industrialised economies
- Governments are beginning to focus on prevention rather than treatment
- Regulators are becoming more cautious about approving new medicines

The industry will continue to explore emerging markets for growth, albeit not as aggressively as in the past. Among the top 20 pharmaceutical markets in the world, eight are emerging countries supported by an increasing middle class. Pharmerging markets like China and India are expected to reach the top three in the near future. However, constraints could come from government incentives potentially reducing medication reimbursements and health care costs.

OTC Drugs

- OTC drugs market is poised for the strong growth in the near future owing to factors like accelerated Rx to OTC switch by the drug manufacturers, growing tendency of people towards self- medication in developing regions and cost-saving advantage to citizens in regions of the Asia Pacific and Latin America are strongly driving the regional as well as global market.
- The OTC drugs market will record the highest growth rate in the emerging markets of Latin America, and South East Asia over the coming years. This can be attributed to the rapidly growing population, coupled with an expanding middle class in these regions with an increase in disposable new channels of the accessibility in emerging markets in retail outlets, supermarkets are also contributing to the growth of the OTC medication market in the emerging economies.

Industry Challenges

- Rising customer expectations: The commercial environment is getting harsher, as healthcare payers impose new cost constraints on healthcare providers and scrutinise the value, medicines offer much more carefully. They want new therapies that are clinically and economically better than the existing alternatives, together with hard, real-world outcomes data to back any claims about a medicine's superiority.
- Poor scientific productivity: Pharma's output has remained at a stable level for the past decade. Using the same discovering and developing processes, there's little reason to think its productivity will suddenly soar.
- FDC Ban: The government banned more than 600 different Fixed Dosage Combination drugs this year putting lot of pressure in large brands that were very well established. It was done to prevent anti-microbial resistance.
- Weak Anti-infective season: Normally, the monsoon season is where most of the industry does majority of their sales but this year it was a weak season.

- Constantly rising API Prices: The pollution norms in China have adversely affected the global pharmaceutical market due to rise in API cost. Due to this rise, the Indian API manufacturers have also raised their prices. Now the sale price of medicines in India is controlled by NPPA which fails to recognise the rising costs thereby gutting the margins.
- Push for Generic Medicines: The government of India has launched an initiative for Generic Medicines in order to reduce the cost for the common public. Due to this, many companies have suffered a major hit.
