MANAGEMENT DISCUSSION ANALYSIS AND BUSINESS OUTLOOK

(This review contains Management's discussion of the Company's operational results and financial condition, and should be read in conjunction with the accompanying audited financial statements and associated notes).

INDUSTRY STRUCTURE, DEVELOPMENT AND OUTLOOK:-

India Presents a robust growth opportunities, driven by economic growth, increasing urbanization rising income levels and a large youth population. The Indian telecommunication sector has registered a phenomenal growth during the past few years and has emerged as the second largest network in the world. On back of ongoing investments into infrastructure, the country is projected to witness high penetration of Internet, broadband, and mobile subscribers in the near future, as per an RNCOS report.

The Internet Industry consists of companies that provide a wide variety of products and services primarily online through their Web sites. Operations include, but are not limited to, search engines, retailers, travel services, as well as dial-up and broadband access services. The industry is not particularly capital intensive, although some participants must continually invest in their operations to remain competitive.

Companies in the Internet Industry operate in a highly competitive environment, subject to rapid technological change. Barriers to entry vary, depending upon the particular markets served. Internet companies operate on the global stage, and results often depend upon the performance of overseas markets and currency exchange rates. Moreover, weakness in the retail economy or lower online advertising expenditures can hinder the performance of many participants. Still, long-term prospects for the industry are fairly encouraging. Trends such as increasing worldwide Internet usage, overseas expansion, and the continued popularity of online advertising ought to further benefit companies in this industry. As a result, many industry participants seem well-positioned in attractive markets. Given the dynamic nature of the Internet industry, companies must innovate to remain competitive. This can simply mean offering customers new products and services. However, industry participants must also position themselves to benefit from technological developments, and the creation or expansion of markets.

Opportunities, Threats, Risks and Concerns:

India is expected to have 130.6 million mobile internet users by March 2014, as per a joint study by the Internet and Mobile Association of India (IAMAI) and Indian Market Research Bureau (IMRB). The mobile value-added services (MVAS) market by using the internet is expected to reach US$ 9.5 billion in 2015, from US$ 4.9 billion in 2013, stated a joint research report by Wipro Technologies and the Internet and Mobile Association of India (IAMAI). India will add more Internet users than any country in the world over the next three years, as average penetration rises from 10 per cent to 28 per cent," as per McKinsey and Co report. Besides, with increased Internet penetration, 22 million jobs would be created by 2015.

The telecommunications industry attracted foreign direct investments (FDI) worth US$ 12,856 million between April 2000 to March 2013, an increase of 7 per cent to the total FDI inflows in terms of US$, according to data published by Department of Industrial Policy and Promotion (DIPP). There are very good opportunities in this industry for all companies. For large ISPs, relationships with telcos are becoming manifold. Telcos are being entering the market, and ISPs do not want to run the risk of losing out to the telcos, so many partnerships arise. Mergers with content providers are also occurring. This is the easiest way for both types of company to make their way into the other's market.

The major driving forces for Internet Service Provider Companies include growing use of the internet and emerging new internet technology applications; increasing globalization of the industry; changes in the long term industry growth rate; technological change and manufacturing process innovation; marketing innovation; changes in cost and efficiency; regulatory influences and government policy changes.

The key factors for success of a Private ISP will be a technical edge, financial capability to sustain losses over at least few years, high marketing and promotional budgets, strategic alliances with ancillary service providers, and lobbying power with the central and state governments.

On the other hand, rivalry within the industry; threat of Substitute Products; threat of New Entrants; bargaining power of Suppliers; bargaining Power of Buyers are some of the risks that the Industry is facing. Because of these risks, some companies are even opting out of this Industry by changing their line of business.

And, broadly speaking, ISPs face threats/challenges in four inter-related areas:

1. Customer Relations;
2. Technology;
3. Regulatory Framework; and
4. Resources

Analysis of financial performance of the company
