5. MANAGEMENT DISCUSSION AND ANALYSIS

Industry Structure & Analysis

The global economy, following two years of crisis, has begun to recover with world growth bouncing back from negative territory in 2009 to about 3.9% during the year. However, the recovery is proceeding at different speeds around the world.

The Indian economy continues to be one of the fastest growing economies and the recovery from the slowdown witnessed in the aftermath of the global crisis has been sharper than what was generally anticipated. India is poised to be the world's engine of economic growth in the coming decades, given that Indians will account for 22 per cent of the increase in world's workforce over the period of 2020-2050.

Yet, despite our country's impressive economic performance and its immense potential there are valid concerns that our growth process needs to be more inclusive and sustainable. In the medium term, per capita income cannot be increased without addressing the twin issues of Education and Employability of the workforce. While the government is investing considerable resources in Education, the private sector needs to address the disconnect between educational qualification and employability, or possession of requisite skills by the workforce.

The creation of a skilled workforce is integral to the strategy for sustaining our growth momentum and achieving double digit growth. According to the Confederation of Indian Industry, one percentage increase in the GDP can translate into an additional 0.8 – 1 million jobs. Enhancing the skill-sets of the nearly 10-12 million individuals who enter the workforce every year is therefore essential to attaining and sustaining a 10 percent growth rate.

However, it is important to note that for education to contribute significantly to economic growth and development, it must be of high quality to meet the skill-demand needs of the economy. The massive expansion of higher and technical education sector in last few years in India has led to a major quality problem. There is a considerable difference in the quality of students / engineers graduating and the kind of talent industry demands. Thus, we have huge supply of graduates but it is not aligned to the industry requirements.

Excellence in Education and Skill Development would not
